CRP Industries Inc. Achieves ISO 9001:2008 Re-Certification

CRANBURY, N.J., September 28, 2009 - CRP Industries Inc., a leader in automotive parts and industrial products distribution has received ISO 9001:2008 re-certification approval. “Our entire organization has been committed to improving the way we conduct business in all areas of our organization, resulting in consistently higher levels of service quality that our customers expect”, comments Daniel Schildge, President and CEO of CRP Industries. Schildge adds, “Since August 2006, when CRP was first accredited as an ISO:9001:2000 company, CRP has embraced a quality management system focus to how we operate.”

The ISO 9001:2008 Quality Management System certification enables companies to demonstrate to their customers a commitment towards the highest levels of service quality and resulting customer satisfaction, as well as continuously improving upon their quality management system. With the ISO 9001:2008 certification, our customers can be assured that our business procedures are both well-documented and conform to the exacting ISO standards of quality while providing a personalized approach to servicing the needs of all our customers, large or small. ISO auditors inspected the entire CRP management system including operations, production, R&D, customer service and sales finding zero non-conformances. “This is very rare in these types of audits and re-certification inspections and is a credit to the dedication of CRP employees and management staff”, states Tarun Singh, Quality Control Manager of CRP. Singh adds, “The new CRP corporate facility with over 100,000 square feet of warehouse and production space enables the Quality Control Department to dedicate space for a holding and quarantine area to inspect both inbound and outbound shipments further increasing the level of CRP’s service quality to our valued customers.”

“This achievement and re-certification would not have been accomplished if it weren’t for the total dedication of each and every CRP employee,” Dan Schildge states. “The ISO 9001:2008 Quality Management System validates the hard work and dedication that our people have strived towards developing a company that has quality at the core of everything we do”.
